
Helen Smith-Contini gained her BA and MLitt in Art History at University College Dublin and then completed a postgraduate diploma in the conservation of easel paintings at the Courtauld Institute of Art, London (1995-1998). Her professional career took her to Germany where she initially worked for the Restaurierungszentrum der Landeshauptstadt D&uuml;sseldorf (1998-2003). She then completed a four year conservation treatment of a large altarpiece by the Italian Renaissance artist Paris Bordone (Gem&auml;ldegalerie, Berlin). This project, which was supported by the Getty Foundation (J. P. Getty Museum, Los Angeles) included a technical examination of the painting and presented to the public in an exhibition. Since 2009 she has been working for the Cranach Digital Archive.

Lecture Abstract:&nbsp;The Cranach Digital Archive (www.lucascranach.org) is an interdisciplinary collaborative research resource, providing access to art historical, technical and conservation information on paintings by Lucas Cranach (c.1472-1553), his sons and his workshop. At present the project is supported by more than 325 museums, research institutions, parishes and private collections worldwide.&nbsp;This lecture will present our objectives, challenges, experiences and perspectives.
