<h2>Academic Year 2019/2020</h2>

This module examines the evolution of UN Peacekeeping since the formation of the United Nations. It engages with a diversity of theoretical perspectives in examining approaches to the practice of UN Peacekeeping, that also extend into theoretical debates located within security studies and peace and conflict studies. It provides students with an in-depth understanding of how peacekeeping is situated in the UN system and delves into controversies and challenges in UN responses to changing patterns of insecurity in the twenty first century. The module will also look at specific case studies in order to support the theoretical debates and draw comparisons. Classes will be delivered in the form of seminars, where students are expected to contribute to the discussions. Classes will also involve small group discussions and project work.
